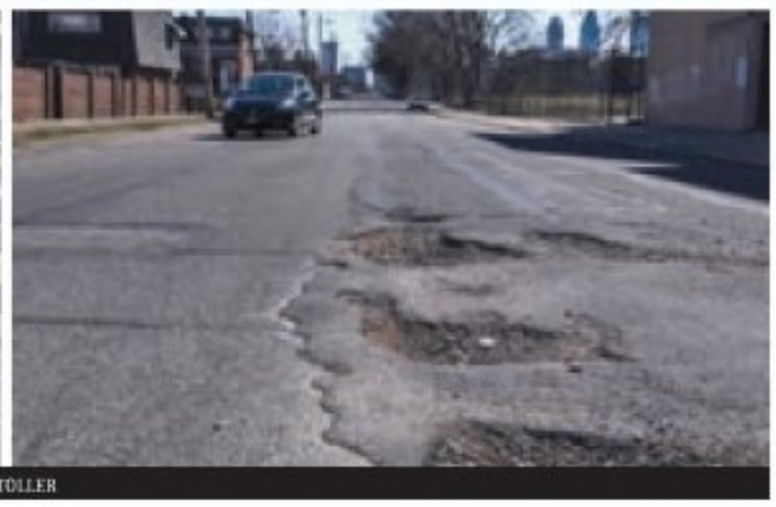
Potholes, get ready to get your asphalt kicked

Rocky roads. Metro sets out to find the worst potholes in the region brought on by the winter thaw.



A cab passes a deep pothole on 13th Street in Center City. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER

Whether you walk, bike, drive, or take a bus, you've encountered the potholes that have opened up all over Philly in recent months.

"Berks and Front streets might as well be a dirt road. It's been repaved and patched up so many times," said Clay Simmons, 38.

"Terribly slow," was how Clarisa Parker characterized the city's response to potholes.

But officials say they're working as fast as they can.

"We want to get the streets back into a state of good repair, and we're going to do whatever it takes to get there," said Stephen Lorenz, chief highway engineer for the Philadelphia Streets Department.

The Streets Department had filled 15,528 potholes since Jan. 1, as of Thursday.

In 2014, 52,756 potholes were filled. That's more than twice as many as the 20,000 or so the department saw in past years during less harsh winters.

The Streets Department is repaving streets to make them less vulnerable to potholes, but they can't do them all.

#messageinapothole

In a bid to conquer the potholes, Metro is inviting readers to send pics of the worst they see.

- Tweet your pictures @ Metrophilly or email them to sam.newhouse@metro.us.
- Vote on the worst at Metro.us. The winner will get printed.

Workers resurfaced 25 miles last year, and have about 60 miles planned this year — far short of the 130-mile per year goal that would put them in good shape, Lorenz said.

"We're trying to pick the worst of the worst," he said. "Hopefully, we'll be able to get some of those nastier, pothole-ridden streets done under our repaving program."

Not all potholes get asphalt. To keep repairs moving, the Streets Department sprays holes with emulsifier or tar and packs them with loose stone and gravel. Traffic beats the material down, creating what Lorenz called "a permanent solution."

Parker doubts that.

"That black stuff they put in — a car goes over and it rolls right out," she said.

Meanwhile, PennDOT is set to repave about 300 miles in the five-county region this year, said spokesman Charles Metzger.

PennDOT poured 2,373 tons of asphalt between Dec. 1 and March 17 as part of road repairs, he said.

That's about half as much as the 5,437 tons they poured in that same period last year.

To report city potholes, residents can call 311 or tweet at @PhillyStreets. For PennDOT streets, call 1-800-FIX-ROAD.

Over it. Mo'ne Davis forgives Twitter-hater

Mo'ne Davis doesn't want a college baseball player who insulted her on Twitter dropped from his team, reports say.

TMZ reported Monday that Davis, the famed Taney Dragons pitcher who rocked the Little League World Series, and her manager contacted Bloomsburg University to ask forgiveness for Joey Casselberry, a first baseman and record-breaking Montgomery County native.

Casselberry was dropped from his school's team over the weekend after tweeting on Friday, "Disney is making a movie about Mo'ne Davis. WHAT A JOKE. That slut got rocked by Nevada." The University still won't let Casselberry play, despite Davis' plea. SAM NEWHOUSE

Police seek brawlers on platform

He didn't see it coming.

A group of young men swarmed a Philly straphanger sitting on a northbound Walnut-Locust Station platform and beat the living daylights out of him, a video released Monday shows.

The attack went down on Thursday at 4:15 p.m.

Video of the brawl / PPD

In the police surveillance video, the pack is seen approaching the man, who was waiting for a SEPTA train. Then, for no apparent reason, the young men unleashed a series of punishing blows and kept after the victim as he tried to escape. The victim was hospitalized for his injuries. ## Teacher pleads guilty to sex with teen Jessica Streeper, of Doylestown, admitted Monday to having sex with a 14-year-old boy in her 8th-grade math class.

Streeper, 34, pleaded guilty to one count of involuntary sexual deviate intercourse and could face 10 to 20 years in prison, reports say.

Streeper was arrested in May 2014. Police said Streeper and the boy exchanged sexual texts, had sex in her car and at her home. METRO

Philadelphia police need more training, feds say

Cops. A long-awaited federal review of Philly cops finds the department lacking in key areas.

19th district officers during a briefing. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER

Philadelphia police need more training to defuse significant tension between the community and police, according to a U.S. Justice Department report on police use of deadly force released on Monday.

The highly anticipated report identified "serious deficiencies in the department's use of force policies and training," the Justice Department said.

The Office of Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS) report was in response to a 2013 request for help from Philadelphia Police Commissioner Charles Ramsey, considered a national leader in policing, after a spike in officer-involved shootings.

Quoted

"Incidents involving discourtesy, use of force, and allegations of bias by officers leave segments of the community feeling disenfranchised and distrustful of (police)." JUSTICE

The PPD is among several departments under scrutiny for use of deadly force after the deaths of unarmed individuals in cities ranging from Ferguson, Missouri to New York.

Ramsey was tapped by President Barack Obama to head a national task force to improve police and community relations in the wake of unrest touched off by the 2014 killing of Michael Brown.

In Philadelphia, multiple cases of police brutality and rogue behavior have eroded the community's trust in the police department, the report said.

Among them was a Philadelphia detective charged with helping his girlfriend, who was a murder suspect, hide from police, and a band of narcotics officers accused of dangling people from high-rise balconies as an interrogation technique and stealing dealers' drug stashes.

The report said training should include ways to peacefully resolve conflicts and use of non-lethal alternatives for defusing confrontations.

The recommendations will be implemented over the next 18 months and their success will be measured by two progress reports, the Justice Department said. REUTERS

Montco. Cops nab tool theft ring

Three Philadelphia men were charged in Montgomery County with stealing tens of thousands of dollars in power tools over a two-month period.

Police were able to reconstruct their whereabouts through cellphone tower records.

Matthew Suarez, Nicholas Suarez and Donald Hodum face 197 counts of theft by unlawful taking, conspiracy and related offenses.

Police say the men targeted work vans in Chester, Montgomery and Delaware counties.

Investigators originally stopped the men after a concerned citizen in Whitemarsh Township reported suspicious activity. Officers found numerous stolen tools in the men's vehicle, according to prosecutors.

Police then analyzed cellphone tower data to determine that the men were in the area of several thefts at the time they occurred.

Prosecutors say the ring took about $72,000 worth of tools. DAN KELLEY

Leaving the car stereo and taking ... the air bag?

Crime. Thieves are focusing on car air bags.

A Honda steering wheel, behind which is an air bag

KEVORK DJANSEZIAN, GETTY IMAGES

Forget that car stereo. Insurance experts say smash-and-grab thieves who target parked cars are frequently after a different quarry: your car's air bag.

Thieves in the Rhawnhurst section early Monday stole air bags from four cars, all of them Hondas. That follows on the heels of a spurt of air bag thefts on March 1 in which thieves targeted nine cars — again, all Hondas.

"It typically happens in a rash," said Carrol Kaplan, director of public affairs for the National Crime Insurance Bureau. "They steal for resale. There's a big profit margin in it for them."

Kaplan says that stolen air bags are often sold over the Internet through sites like Craigslist or eBay. Often, the buyer is someone who was in an accident, but doesn't want to report it to their insurance company to avoid paying a deductible.

Where a new air bag costs $1,000, stolen ones can be bought for $200.

Another source of stolen air bags is unscrupulous auto body shops, which buy them cheap but bill insurance companies for new equipment, Kaplan said. Some will even place orders for bags that match cars they are working on.

The Insurance Information Institute estimates that there are over 75,000 air bags stolen each year. They cost insurers about $75 million each year.

Yemen edges toward war

Security. The U.S. had to evacuate its remaining personnel, including about 100 special operations forces.

Nasser Street in Ta'izz, Yemen / GETTY IMAGES

Yemen's top factions are squaring off for battle after months of skirmishes, turning respectively to neighboring Saudi Arabia and its regional rival Iran for help in what may become an all-out war.

With President Abd-Rabbu Mansour Hadi seeking a comeback from the port city of Aden while the Shi'ite Houthi movement controls the capital Sanaa, rival administrations are trading bellicose rhetoric as fighting intensifies and factions commandeer airfields for the next stage of the struggle.

Somewhat on the sidelines, al Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula and Islamic State are waiting to exploit what some fear could become Yemen's worst conflict since a 1994 civil war.

Yemeni Foreign Minister Riyadh Yaseen called on Monday for Gulf Arab help to prevent the Houthis' getting air control.

"We have expressed to the Gulf Cooperation Council, the United Nations as well as the international community that there should be a no-fly zone, and the use of military aircraft should be prevented at the airports controlled by the Houthis," he told the newspaper al-Sharq al-Awsat. REUTERS

Five things you need to know

1 Netanyahu tells Israel's Arabs he 'regrets' rallying call

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said on Monday he regretted offending Israel's Arabs during a rallying call on election day last week that his critics had denounced as racist.

In a video clip posted on his Facebook page, Netanyahu told representatives of Israel's Arab community: "I know that the things I said a few days ago offended Israel's Arabs. I had no intention for this to happen, I regret this."

NETANYAHU /GETTY IMAGES

Fearing his voters would stay home, Netanyahu, who won a surprise election victory last Tuesday and is set to head a new government, accused left-wing organizations of bussing Arab-Israelis to the polls "in droves" to vote against him.

"The rule of the right is in danger," he said at the time.

Speaking to the group of Israeli Arabs at his official residence in Jerusalem on Monday, Netanyahu said: "I consider myself as prime minister of each one of you, of all Israel's citizens, regardless of religion, race or gender."

2 Missing student found alive in Yosemite National Park

A college student who went missing in Yosemite National Park over the weekend was found alive on Monday, suffering from multiple injuries, about a quarter mile from where he was last seen, park rangers said.

Michael "Mic" Dahl, 20, was reported missing on Saturday by his three friends after he vanished while they were scrambling on rocks beneath Lower Yosemite Fall. The group had just hiked a paved path to the falls.

3 New Orleans judge declares Robert Durst major flight risk, denies bail

Robert Durst, the real estate scion awaiting extradition to California to face a murder charge, was denied bail on Monday after a judge deemed him to be a potential danger to others and a likely flight risk.

Durst must remain in Louisiana on local weapons charges at least until his next court date on April 2, Magistrate Judge Harry Cantrell ruled.

"There is a substantial risk the defendant might flee," the judge said.

4 Texas boy, 12, in custody for fatal shooting of 13-year-old

A 12-year-old boy has been taken into police custody for the homicide of a 13-year-old, who was shot when the two were playing with a gun in a suburban Dallas home last month, police said on Monday.

Matthew Cisneros, 13, was found dead with a fatal gunshot wound at his family's home in Garland, with a pistol near the body, police said.

The death was ruled a homicide, which prompted the police to take the 12-year-old, who has not been identified, into custody, police said. They added they initially believed the death was a suicide.

5 Virginia police say no evidence for Rolling Stone's college rape story

A police investigation has found no evidence to back up a discredited Rolling Stone magazine story about a gang rape at a University of Virginia fraternity, officials said.

Rolling Stone magazine reported in November about an alleged 2012 attack on a woman at a Phi Kappa Psi fraternity house pledge party and the university's failure to respond to it. The magazine backtracked on its story in December, citing "discrepancies" in the accuser's account.

2016. Does Cruz have what it takes to defeat Hillary Clinton?

Texan Sen. Ted Cruz has announced that he will run for president in 2016, becoming the first major candidate in the race to the White House. Cruz made his announcement during a speech at Liberty University in Lynchburg, Virginia. The 44-year-old Republican's eligibility as a candidate has already hit controversy as Cruz was born in Canada, while the U.S. Constitution restricts the presidency to "natural-born citizens" of the United States. Timothy Carney, a fellow at the Washington, D.C.-based think tank American Enterprise Institute, profiles the candidate.

Ted Cruz is the first major candidate to announce a presidential bid for 2016. / GETTY IMAGES

Is he a real counterweight to presumed Democratic contender Hillary Clinton?
Cruz lacks the experience and political network Hillary Clinton has, but so did Barack Obama in 2008. He is focusing his attacks on corporate welfare, which will be an effective criticism of Clinton. First, though, he would need to win the Republican Party nomination against many strong candidates.

What is he famous for?
Cruz is famous as an anti-establishment fighter. He challenges his own party's leadership as much as he battles Democrats. Most famously, he led the filibuster that shut down the government for 17 days in 2013, in an effort to block President Obama's health care law.

What's the most important thing we heard in Cruz's speech in Lynchburg, Virginia?
Cruz played up his very American and compelling family story, including his father from Cuba, his mother from a European background and his wife with missionary experience. Also, he played up religious, conservative issues more than most people expected. DMITRY BELYAEV, METRO WORLD NEWS

Question

What is he known for?

Ted Cruz is a U.S. senator from Texas. He's a Republican, first elected in 2012. He is conservative, and is seen as a leader of the Tea Party movement. Cruz was born in Canada, but he was a U.S. citizen when he was born, and so he is allowed to run for president, according to the standard interpretation of the U.S. Constitution.

Auto. General Motors ignition switch death toll increases to 74

General Motors has seven more claims eligible for compensation for deaths due to accidents caused by faulty ignition switches, taking the total to 74, according to the official administering the company's compensation program.

Lawyer Kenneth Feinberg determined that a total of 200 claims, including 11 severely injured and 115 who were hospitalized, are eligible for compensation, as of March 20.

He began evaluating the claims and determining compensation after General Motors received 475 claims for deaths, 289 for catastrophic injuries and 3,578 for less-serious injuries requiring hospitalization, through a Jan. 31 deadline.

Feinberg's report said 1,025 claims had been deemed ineligible, while 1,326 claims were under review. Applications for 1,075 claims lacked sufficient paperwork or evidence, and 716 claims had no documentation at all.

GM has set aside an initial $400 million to cover compensation costs. REUTERS

Honda hires U.S. engineering firm Exponent to probe Takata air bags

Honda Motor Co has hired Exponent, a U.S.-based engineering consulting company enlisted by Toyota Motor Corp during its recall crisis in 2010, to investigate the cause of ruptures in some air bags made by Takata Corp.

The hiring of Exponent was first reported by Japan's Jiji News on Monday and confirmed by a Honda spokesman in Tokyo.

A consortium of 10 automakers led by Toyota Motor Corp. and which includes Honda has separately commissioned engineering firm Orbital ATK to conduct independent testing of Takata's air bag inflators, which can rupture with too much force, shooting metal shards into vehicles. Six deaths have been linked to the problem so far, all on Honda cars. REUTERS

Are students losing interest in Chinese?

Asian studies. Educators say fewer students are signing up to learn Chinese.

American students are getting cold feet about studying Chinese in China, with many study abroad programs in the country seeing a substantial drop in enrollment over the last few years.

At the University of California Education Abroad Program (UCEAP), student enrollment in programs in China is expected to be less than half the level it was only four years ago.

The apparent waning of interest worries some China watchers. Given the importance of the U.S.-China relationship, having a group of Americans across different industries who speak Chinese and understand the culture is "a matter of national interest," says Robert Daly, director of the Kissinger Institute on China and the United States at the Wilson Center in Washington.

The Institute of International Education says the number of U.S. students studying in China fell 3.2 percent in 2012-13 to 14,413, even as overall study abroad numbers rose modestly.

By contrast, the number of Chinese studying in the United States jumped 16.5 percent in 2013-14 to more than 274,000.

No payoff?

When students do come to China, they are increasingly coming for shorter periods of time, and often for trips that involve more travel than language study, study abroad executives say.

After a burst of enthusiasm a decade ago, interest in learning Chinese appears to be waning among U.S. students.

Between 2002 and 2006, Chinese language study at U.S. institutes of higher education leapt 50 percent, according to the Modern Language Association (MLA); it grew a further 16 percent between 2006 and 2009.

But from 2009 to 2013, growth in enrollment had slowed to just 2 percent, an MLA study released last month shows.

"It really comes down to money," says John Thomson, a veteran China study abroad executive. "You're taking yourself out of the job market for a couple years to study an extremely difficult language with no guaranteed pay-off at the end." REUTERS

The bottom line

Less need for foreigners

For U.S. students, China's notorious pollution is a concern. Job opportunities are another. As multinationals in China hire mostly local Chinese, a growing percentage of whom have studied abroad, they have less need for foreigners who speak Chinese.

"I came to China thinking I could learn Chinese and get a high paying job. I learned very quickly that was not the case," says Ian Weissgerber, a 25-year-old American graduate student in China. "A lot of Chinese can speak English just as well as I can, and Chinese is their native tongue too."

How to claim those baffling college tax breaks

Take a deep breath and make sure your finances are in order. / ISTOCK

Financial matters. Remember to get all of the deductions you can.

You may need a degree just to understand the tax breaks available for a college education.

That is unfortunate, because there is evidence that many families are missing out on the available credits and deductions, leaving hundreds if not thousands of dollars on the table.

Only 42 percent of those polled in a Sallie Mae survey, "How America Pays for College 2014," said they used available tax breaks to help reduce college costs. The student lender questions 800 undergraduate college students and 800 parents of undergraduates for the annual survey.

Some high-earning parents may not think they're eligible because of income limits or deductions, but in many cases their college students could be taking advantage of the breaks, says Lisa Greene-Lewis, a CPA and tax expert for TurboTax.

At the other end of the income scale, families that earn too little to owe income taxes could still get up to $1,000 back because one of the credits is refundable. Yet only 36 percent of those who make less than $35,000 said they took advantage of tax breaks. REUTERS

Take note

What you need to know

The American Opportunity Credit is typically the most valuable credit, if you qualify. It reduces taxes dollar-for-dollar for the first $2,000 of college expenses and then by 25 percent of the next $2,000, for a total of $2,500 per student. To qualify, the student must attend college at least half-time, and the credit cannot be claimed for more than four tax years. Any year when the old Hope Credit was claimed counts toward that limit. Remember to keep careful records.

Writing things off

Other deductions

If you can't take either of these credits, you may still be able to use the tuition and fees deduction. Then there's the deduction for student loan interest, which allows a deduction of up to $2,500. The deduction phases out between $65,000 and $80,000 for singles and between $130,000 and $160,000 for joint filers. You're allowed to take this deduction even if you're claiming one of the other tax breaks.

With the American Opportunity Credit, the cost of books is eligible regardless of where they're bought. Supplies aren't covered at all by the deduction for tuition and fees, which covers just that.

Vin Diesel names new daughter after Paul Walker

Vin Diesel's fraternal affection for his late "Fast and the Furious" co-star Paul Walker is apparently very deep and very authentic. Case in point? Diesel's newborn daughter. "I named her Pauline," he revealed on the "Today" show. "There's no other person [I was] thinking about as I cut the umbilical cord. I knew he was there and I felt it was a way to keep [him] a part of my memory, a part of my world." The announcement also came with a surprisingly personal vote of confidence for "Today" show anchor Natalie Morales: "I'm telling you this because I love you," Diesel said. "I know that you are a good soul, and I know that this is in good hands." So, um, good job, Ms. Morales?

Mila Kunis' marital status revealed

James Corden is off to a good start as the newest, late-night talk show host on the block, as during his very first guest segment he managed to kind of sort of confirm that Mila Kunis and Ashton Kutcher are indeed already married. During Corden's premiere interview with Kunis — pre-taped ahead of its Monday airing, according to the Daily Mail — the British host continually prods the "Jupiter Ascending" actress about whether she and Kutcher have already tied the knot, only to be met with a repeated response of, "Maybe." But he's not having it. "Either you're married or you're not," he says before demanding she show off her left ring finger, which sports a golden wedding band. "They are married, look," the host declares. So now you know.

Taylor Swift racks up the porn domains

Taylor Swift is all about insurance these days, and not just when it comes to her $40 million legs. The savvy pop star reportedly purchased a number of adult-themed domain names before they became available to the public as a means to thwart porn peddlers from cashing in on her fame. So if you had your heart set on registering domains like TaylorSwift.porn or TaylorSwift.adult, then it sucks to be you. I mean, for multiple reasons, but right now let's just focus on the fact that your hopes for a Swift-themed adult entertainment empire have been dashed.

Jon Hamm's post-'Mad Men' plans

So how is Jon Hamm preparing for life after Don Draper? He's not, really. "The one constant thing I've had in my career is now removed," he tells GQ. "And that's an eye-opener. Are people still going to take me seriously? Am I just going to do romantic comedies for the rest of my life? What's next? And I don't know, you know? I wish I was smug enough to have a grand plan." One thing he does have, though, is some sage advice from "Breaking Bad" star Bryan Cranston on how to weather the post-series finale emotional roller coaster. Hamm says Cranston told him, "It's hard, man. It's hard to let it go. It'll hit you a couple of different ways at different times."

'Harry Potter' meets 'Friends'

This latest YouTube mash-up is short, sweet and perfectly executed. User Jeremiah Rivera admits he "got bored and made this," but I'm glad he did, because that boredom yields a look at the world of "Harry Potter" as if it were actually a "Friends"-style sitcom. I would so totally watch this show. Needs more Snape, though.

A new kind of 'Happy'

Interview. Elisha Cuthbert says she's feeling good about going from "Happy Endings" to "One Big Happy."

Catch "One Big Happy" Tuesdays at 9:30 p.m. on NBC. / GREG GAYNE, NBC

Elisha Cuthbert has come a long way from staring down a cougar as Jack Bauer's oft-imperiled daughter on "24." After a stint as the slightly daffy Alex Kerkovich on "Happy Endings," Cuthbert decided to stick with comedy, and found her way to "One Big Happy." The show, produced by Ellen Degeneres, has her playing Lizzy, a lesbian who decides to have a baby with her straight best friend Luke (Nick Zano) just as he meets and marries Prudence (Kelly Brook).

ELISHA CUTHBERT
CHRISTOPHER POLK/NBC

Did you want to stick with comedy for your next project?
I just had so much fun on "Happy Endings" that I felt like this was the perfect transition for me, and to be in front of a live audience is mind-blowing.

Is it scary to go out in front of the crowd?
I got used to the workload that would come with it. I love the schedule, but I will never get over the fear. I don't know how other sitcom actors like the "Friends" cast or "Seinfeld" — I don't know how they felt about it, maybe they didn't care, but I would love to know. Because I am literally petrified until that first take.

What kind of feedback has Ellen provided?
She comes and warms up the audience, which is terrifying, because then we have to follow the funniest human being. The best note she ever gave me was that we're really going to have to believe in this friendship between Luke and me, which, as far as Lizzy's concerned, is the most important relationship she has. And Ellen was like, we have to believe that, and if we don't believe that in every scene, then we have nothing. So she had great notes.

Bonus questions

Character work

How do you feel about your new character?
She's actually the closest to a character that I've personally been connected to, because I'm a little particular about how I like things. Not uptight, but I have a plan and I'm meticulous about things, and a bit dorky.

Have the writers started adding that dorky side in?
I think it already has been. I think there was a certain type, and then as they started to see that I was a bit like that, it evolved. I mean, on "Happy Endings," I didn't know I was a complete dodo until Season 2.

Odessa's debut album comes out April 28. / (NEIL KRUG

Born into a musical family, Odessa (née Odessa Jorgensen) started taking violin lessons when she was 4 years old. "I can remember what I wore to my first lesson so clearly," she says. "It may be one of my better childhood memories." In high school, she started playing guitar, performing with various rock bands in California and fiddling around with her own songwriting.

She heard Nashville had a big music scene, so when she turned 18 she decided to fly there and check it out. "I stayed in a hostel and didn't know a single person," she says. "I found a bike and biked to all these different music venues and just fell in love with the place."

Chance meeting at the grocery store

She took a job at a grocery store and started taking fiddle lessons in her free time. "About a month in, I met a woman in the grocery store line who needed a violin player. She's this amazing lady named Gail Davies and is the first woman producer in country music. I started playing sessions for her and she's been a guiding force in my musical life ever since," she says.

Soon, she started touring with bands, making a comfortable enough living, but took the big risk of breaking away to record her own album, pairing up with Kings of Leon's producer Jacquire King. But just when she felt she was finally in control of her music career, everything came to a stop.

Surrendering control

Odessa was putting the finishing touches on her album when she got hit by a car while riding her bike. She fractured her skull and spine and knocked her teeth out. Everything came to a stop for two months. She couldn't sing. She couldn't travel. She couldn't do anything.

"The day I came home from the hospital, I got a phone call from Ed Sharpe's manager [she met the band, by chance of course, on a train at the Railroad Revival Tour] asking me if I wanted to tour the country with them playing violin. The tour started the exact day my doctor said I would be able to walk around and start functioning," she says.

"If I hadn't gotten into that accident, I wouldn't have gone on the road with them because I was fully devoted to my album at the time. But I didn't have the energy to record. So I showed up six weeks later with a neck brace and 12 stitches in my lip like, 'Hey guys!'"

Now, the tour is long over and her first full-length album is finally out April 28. As for what's next, she's not quite sure. But somehow, we suspect everything will work out just fine.

Comfort food with a skinny swap

Before spring's rhubarb and ramps arrive, we asked Gina Homolka, author and recipe developer at SkinnyTaste.com, to share one last healthy dish using our favorite winter vegetable. This lasagna gets a healthy upgrade with butternut squash. Cut even more calories by building portion control into the dish. "Rather than making it as a large tray, I prefer to make them into rolls, which I load up with vegetables," says Homolka. Who knew comfort food could be so good for you? MARIANNE HAYES

Butternut Squash Lasagna Rolls
THE SKINNYTASTE COOKBOOK

Recipe

Butternut Squash Lasagna Rolls

Ingredients:

- 1 pound peeled butternut squash, diced
- 1 tsp olive oil
- 1/4 cup minced shallots
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 1/2 tbsp fresh grated Parmesan cheese
- 10 oz. frozen chopped spinach, cooked, cooled and squeezed dry
- 1 3/4 cups fat-free ricotta cheese
- 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 1 large egg
- 1/2 tsp kosher salt
- 9 cooked lasagna noodles
- 9 tbsp shredded part-skim mozzarella cheese
- 1/8 tsp black pepper

Directions:

Preheat the oven to 350°F. Place squash in a large pot with enough water to cover, plus an additional 2 inches. Add 1 tsp salt and bring to a boil. Cover and cook over medium-low heat until soft, about 12 to 14 minutes.

Remove butternut squash with a slotted spoon and place in a blender with 1/4 cup of the liquid it was cooked in. Reserve an additional 1 cup of liquid.

In a medium nonstick skillet, add the oil and sauté the shallots and garlic over medium-low heat until soft and golden, about 4 to 5 minutes. Add pureed butternut squash, season with 1/4 teaspoon salt and a pinch of fresh cracked pepper, adding about 1/2 cup to 3/4 cup of the reserved liquid to thin out the sauce until smooth. Stir in the Parmesan cheese and set aside.

In a medium bowl, combine the spinach, ricotta, Parmesan, egg, 1/4 tsp salt and 1/8 tsp pepper. Ladle about 1/2 cup of the butternut sauce into the bottom of a 9x13-inch baking dish.

Put a piece of wax paper on a work surface and lay the cooked lasagna noodles out on it. Make sure the noodles are dry. Spread 1/3 cup of the ricotta mixture over each noodle.

Carefully roll them up and place them seam side down in the baking dish. Ladle the remaining sauce over the lasagna rolls and top each with 1 tbsp mozzarella.

Tightly cover the dish with tinfoil and bake until the inside is heated through and the cheese is melted, about 40 minutes.

Do you have symptoms that may be caused by the flu?

If the answer is yes, would you be interested in taking part in a clinical research study?

The purpose of Study VX14-787-103 is to assess the effectiveness and safety of an investigational medication in patients with the flu. The study is divided into two parts, A and B. Your study doctor will let you know whether you will be participating in Part A or Part B of the study.

You may be able to take part in Study VX14-787-103 if you:

- are between 18 and 64 years of age
- have symptoms of the flu (fever, cough, blocked nose, body aches, or fatigue)
- have flu that is confirmed by the study doctor
- do not have any other serious medical conditions
- have had these symptoms for less than 2 days (Part B only).

Make change your routine

With a little courage, spring can be a time of personal growth.

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metro.us

Forget your broken New Year's resolutions. With spring finally here, it feels like the real new year is just now beginning. If you're ready to switch things up, Lu Ann Cahn — whose memoir "I Dare Me" recounts her year spent trying something new every day — shares how stepping into the unknown led her to happiness.

Failure is not the end

The hardest part of trying something new is the first step. But Cahn found that even when she didn't succeed, the experience of stepping outside her comfort zone built courage, anticipation and readiness for more. "Almost immediately, I started feeling better. And the more I took risks, large and small, everything got better — life opened up."

One thing leads to another...

As she gained confidence, the scope of Cahn's goals grew beyond what she'd anticipated, like going back to school after age 40. "Before I started this journey, I don't know that I would've been able to tackle it because I was so stuck," she says.

Stop assuming

"There's a whole buffet of life out there, and we keep picking at the same part every day without realizing we're missing great experiences," Cahn says. She thought she'd hate golf, but what she really never wants to do again is go to the opera. "We make judgments about things every day — someone asks you to do something, and you think, 'I don't feel like it, it's not my thing' — and that's where we kind of miss out."

You don't know if you'll love it until you try. ISTOCK

Don't be afraid to fly solo

Though her friends were supportive of her project, staying committed sometimes meant going it alone for Cahn. But that's when things got interesting. "It's good to venture off on your own because things happen differently when you're by yourself. My world expanded because of it."

Reality check

When Cahn first started out, she had nothing to lose after her job of 20 years drastically changed in 2009. There was no room for doubt; moving forward was the only option. But even six years later, her old, cautious way of thinking hasn't gone away. So, she came up with a counter-argument: "I have to remind myself, like anybody else, to say, 'What's the worst thing that can happen?'"

Twist out the headache with these yoga moves

When a dark room and a compress aren't enough.

ROMINA MCGUINNESS
letters@metro.us

There's nothing like a headache to bring your day to a grinding halt. Even routine things like chores can become impossible when you just can't concentrate thanks to all the pressure and pain building inside your head. Since you can only take so many aspirin in a day, we asked yogi Kathryn Budig to share some yoga poses to get some natural headache relief.

Extended Puppy

From your hands and knees, walk your hands forward a few inches and curl your toes under. As you exhale, move your butt halfway back toward your heels. Keep your arms engaged and don't let your elbows touch the ground. Drop your forehead to the floor and relax your neck. Keep a slight curve in your lower back. Press your hands down and stretch through the arms while pulling your hips back toward your heels. Hold for 30 seconds, and then release your butt down onto your heels.

Head to Knee

Sit on the floor with your legs straight in front of you. Inhale, bend your right knee, and draw the heel back. Press your right hand against the crease where the thigh meets the pelvis, and your left hand on the floor beside your hip. Exhale and turn your torso slightly to the left, lifting it as you push down on the inner right thigh. Reach out with your right hand to take the inner left foot, thumb on the sole.

Inhale and lift your torso, pressing the top of the left thigh into the floor and extending through the left heel. Use the pressure of the left hand on the floor to increase the twist to the left. Reach your left hand to the outside of the foot. With arms fully extended, lengthen your torso. Lengthen forward into a comfortable stretch; hold for about one minute. Come up on an inhale, and then repeat on the other side.

Standing Forward Fold

Stand in Tadasana, hands on hips. Exhale and bend forward from the hips, not the waist. As you descend, draw your torso out of the groin, opening the space between the pelvis and the sternum. Keeping your knees straight (if possible), bring your fingertips to the floor, slightly in front of or beside your feet. Cross your forearms and hold your elbows. Hold for up to one minute. To come back up, don't roll the spine. Put your hands back on your hips, then press your tailbone down and into the pelvis and come up on an inhale.

Horoscope

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20
A small side business will bring in extra income. Don't allow unpaid bills to add up. If you are struggling, get in touch with an adviser.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21
Don't let an oversensitive attitude dictate your actions, or you will make an unfortunate mistake that will ruin your plans.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20
Profit can be yours if you act at the right moment. An energetic approach will help you take care of unfinished business. Help someone in need.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22
You will be tempted to take on too much. Keep your schedule flexible so that you will be able to deal with unanticipated matters.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22
There will be underlying problems regarding your work. Stick to your tasks and don't offer opinions or make judgments.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22
Everyone will want to hear your ideas, so present them with enthusiasm. Someone who can make a strong impact on your future will show interest in you.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22
Beware of joint ventures that involve giving more than you get. A close friend will not turn out to be a good professional partner.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21
You'll end up riding an emotional roller coaster if you aren't careful. It's a good time to stay on the sidelines.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21
You may lack energy, but you should resist the temptation to take it easy. You will accomplish much and gain respect if you complete all of your responsibilities.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20
You have a unique sense of fashion. Some innovative but inexpensive ideas will result in an updated personal look.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18
Household demands will have family members feeling anxious. Take on projects that will make your surroundings more comfortable and convenient.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20
Don't hold back about telling your friends and loved ones how you feel. It will improve your relationships.

Unequal transactions

I heard a commercial for flipping houses, the process where one buys a house, doesn't live in it, holds onto it for a year or two and then sells it for a healthy $60,000 profit. This is called an excellent business transaction. Eric Garner bought two packs of cigarettes a day at $8-10 dollars a pack, and sells them loosely for .75 cents to $1 for a healthy $10-20 dollar daily profit. This is called a crime. A couple have alcoholic beverages at an outdoor restaurant and it's a leisurely luxury. Another person buys a beer at a deli and drinks it on the street and it's called a crime. These people would have loved to have a beer at an outdoor restaurant, but are living within their means and can't afford to do so. There is something inherently wrong and inequitable in our rule of law.

DAVID DIBELLO, VIA EMAIL

Meaty issue

With April Fools' Day just around the corner, it appears that the meat, egg, and dairy industries have been playing us for fools all year-round. Their more remarkable hoaxes include "California's happy cows," "Free-range chickens," "Humane slaughter." All lies. Less fun is the stuff they never talk about. Like the hundreds of millions of chickens crammed seven into a cage designed for one, unable to move or spread their wings. Or their male counterparts ground up live at birth and fed to other chickens.

Nola to pitch Friday

The Phillies have always believed that 2014 first round pick (No. 7 overall) was a "fast track" pro prospect. They'll prove it Friday, when they call up the 22-year-old for a day to start against the Yankees in a spring training game.

1 Eagles expected to make more noise at owners meetings

The Eagles have given fans a break, and the media as well after their week and a half roster overhaul earlier this month. But things are expected to pick up again as the NFL Owners Meetings continue this week.

Chip Kelly, Howie Roseman and Jeffrey Lurie are on hand to vote on potential rule changes - like expanding replay or altering extra points. And with Kelly still looking for a wide receiver and several other positions, as well as planning for the upcoming NFL draft, there could be a deal or two mixed in this week too.

Kelly will address the media at 7:15 a.m. Wednesday along with the other NFC general managers, and he will surely be asked to expand on his recent cavalcade of unconventional moves. EVAN MACY

2 NFL changes on the horizon

News of the first of what is likely to be several changes in the NFL was announced Monday when the league said it would discontinue, at least for 2015, their blackout policy. This NFL regulation forced home teams that did not sell enough tickets to blackout their games in the city and surrounding area of the team.

Giants' owner John Mara addressed the idea of expanding the NFL's postseason.

"We're going to discuss the expanded playoffs, but I don't think there is a proposal out there to make any changes," Mara said prior to the NFL Owners Meetings. "I think it's going to happen at some point. It just doesn't look like it's going to happen next year." EVAN MACY

3 Phillies hurlers shut out Twins

David Buchanan tossed five scoreless innings while four other relievers, including Ken Giles and Jake Diekman, combined to allow just five hits in a 3-0 spring training win over Minnesota Monday.

Cody Asche blasted a second-inning homer to score Carlos Ruiz and give the Phillies an early lead in the winning effort, one that saw most Phillies regulars reach base, including Chase Utley, Ryan Howard and Ben Revere.

4 76ers continue road trip in Sacramento

The 76ers squandered an opportunity to earn their first three-game win streak in more than a year Sunday night in Los Angeles.

But after they blew a one-point, fourth-quarter lead and were outscored 27-12 in the final 12 minutes against the Lakers, the Sixers have another opportunity against a bottom-feeding West Coast squad Tuesday night

Philly will tip off against the 24-45 Sacramento Kings Tuesday (on CSN) looking to get back on track and improve their 17-53 record, the third worst in the NBA.

The Sixers will conclude their road trip the next day Wednesday in Denver. EVAN MACY

No. 1

Rangers (46-18-7)

The Rangers, Canadiens and Ducks all have 99 points (the most in the NHL) after New York caught up to the other two clubs by crushing Anaheim, 7-2, on Sunday. The only question with New York remains who is their starting goaltender in the playoffs? Cam Talbot or Henrik Lundqvist?

No. 2

Canadiens (46-20-7)

The race for the No. 1 seed in the East, not to mention the Atlantic Division crown looks destined to go down to the last day of the regular season (April 11). Montreal has won its last three games but it can't really shake Tampa Bay, which still trails the Habs by only two points and is 4-0 against them.

No. 3

Blues (45-21-7)

Anaheim might have two more points than St. Louis but after that horrific loss at New York, I think there is little doubt who the best team in the West is. The Blues have scored the most goals (223) in the West and they own the best goal-differential (plus-43) in the superior conference.

No. 4

Lightning (45-21-7)

With only nine games left in the regular season, the Lightning are peaking at the right time. Captain Steven Stamkos dropped the gloves for only the second time in his career as Tampa Bay beat the reeling Bruins, 5-3, on Sunday. Goaltender Ben Bishop earned the third star of the week in the NHL.

No. 5

Ducks (46-21-7)

This might seem harsh but it's hard to take Anaheim seriously as the top overall team since its goal-differential is a pedestrian plus-10. The Ducks' five-game road trip couldn't have gotten off to a worse start than it did in New York but I expect them to bounce back on Tuesday in Columbus.

No. 6

Predators (44-21-8)

The Predators aren't out of the woods just yet (3-6-1 in last 10 games) but maybe their 3-0 win over Buffalo on Saturday will help to turn things around. The schedule doesn't let up with their next five games against playoff teams (Canadiens, Lightning, Capitals, Flames and Canucks).

B'Hawks (43-22-6)

The Blackhawks were one of the hottest teams in the NHL then they no-showed in Dallas on Saturday (4-0 loss). Chicago's next three games (Hurricanes, Flyers, Blue Jackets) are against non-playoff teams so they should roll. The Predators are four points ahead of the Blackhawks but Chicago has two games in hand.

No. 8

Islanders (44-25-4)

For the Islanders, dreams of a Metropolitan Division title are all but gone thanks to the Rangers. Now, the Isles are just trying to hang onto home ice as Pittsburgh is two points behind them for fourth-place in the East. The Isles host four tough teams this week: Wild, Kings, Ducks and Red Wings.

Penguins (40-22-10)

With Evgeni Malkin (28 goals, 40 assists) missing the past four games and Patric Hornqvist (23 goals, 22 assists) out since March 15, the Penguins are hanging on for dear life. Pittsburgh hosts St. Louis on Tuesday in a huge game before six straight against non-playoff teams.

No. 10

Red Wings (39-21-11)

Detroit is still not right (4-6-0 in last 10 games) but Sunday's 2-1 overtime win vs. St. Louis was a great win. The Red Wings are tough to beat at home (20-7-7) and their next three games are there: Coyotes, Sharks and Lightning. There is no time to waste with Washington one point behind them.

No. 11

Wild (40-25-7)

In the second half of the season, has there been a more consistent team in the West than Minnesota? The Wild are 7-3-0 in their last 10 games and a 6-3 win over St. Louis on Saturday was mighty impressive. Something to watch: Minnesota's final nine games are against playoff teams.

Phillies

Is Franco the third baseman of the future? / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Ruben ruining Franco?

The anemic spring performance and Triple-A demotion of Phillies prospect Maikel Franco really concerns me. Yes, Franco is just 22, and could roar back. But the Amaro Regime's handling of prospects is so abysmal that I fear the third baseman becomes the next casualty. The Phils jerked Dom Brown up and down the system, bad-mouthed Darin Ruf, and still can't agree whether Jesse Biddle sustained a concussion. Each may have failed on his own merits. But in an organization that hasn't developed a position player since Carlos Ruiz, there's every reason to worry that Franco becomes the next casualty. Beyond that, Franco and Ken Giles were the only two Phils I was anticipating for Opening Day. Is there any other reason to watch this club?

Eagles

Whose the best?

The passing of the legendary Chuck Bednarik opened a debate on who now holds the distinction of Greatest Living Eagle. As Hall of Famers, Tommy McDonald or Bob Brown probably deserve the nod. But I'll nominate Brian Dawkins (a future Hall of Famer), whose spirit and excellence embodied everything this fan base cheers for. Other at the top of my list: Eric Allen, Bill Bergey, Seth Joyner and – yep – Donovan McNabb. Remember, No. 5 will always love you.

Flyers

Berube on the hot seat?

I'm always reluctant to call for a coach's head, but Craig Berube pushed me there last week when he drove the Greyhound over Steve Mason, one of few players who've given the heartless Flyers an honest season. Berube pulled and humiliated his goalie in Calgary after a screened shot eluded him. It was a disloyal, panicky and counterproductive move. Mason has kept mum all season after losing games in which he got no goal support. The Flyers woes go well beyond Berube, but he's exacerbating them. And here's the saddest part: Fans are starting to forget when this franchise stood for something with its personality and work ethic. I'm not going back to the Bullies, I just need to recall players like Roenick, Laperriere and Primeau who regarded it as special to wear the black-and-orange.

76ers

Noel next to go?

Is it safe for me to fall in (sports) love with Nerlens Noel? Since the All-Star break, the skinny kid has been the NBA's best rookie – a shot-blocking, rebound-grabbing, point-scoring force. In short, everything the Sixers hoped for when they took him with the sixth pick in 2013. I also love that he wants to be part of the franchise's rebirth. And yet, I foresee the team trading him.

Let's say they get lucky in the lottery and land Jahlil Okafor or Karl-Anthony Towns, to go along with rehabbing Joel Embiid. In the mind of Sam Hinkie, that's probably one big man too many. Guess I need to hold off buying that No. 4 jersey.
